This letter is to inform you that Upper Iowa Beef does not use any foods classified as allergens in the production of your product. Additionally, there are no allergens present on the production floors where your products are produced.

The Food Allergen Labeling and Consumer Protection Act (FALCPA) identifies eight foods or food groups as the major food allergens. The most prevalent allergens identified in the US are:

- Milk or Milk-Based Products (e.g., whey, casein)
- Egg or Egg-Based Products (e.g., dried egg whites)
- Fish (e.g., tuna, anchovies, cod)
- Shellfish including Crustaceans (e.g., shrimp, crab, lobster, etc.) and Mollusks (e.g., clams, mussels, oysters)
- Tree Nuts (e.g., almonds, Brazil nuts, cashews, coconut)
- Peanuts or Peanut-Based Products (e.g., peanut butter)
- Wheat or Gluten-Containing Cereal Products (e.g., wheat, rye, barley, triticale, and related grains – not oats)
- Soy or Soy-Based Products (e.g., soy lecithin, textured soy protein)

Further allergens identified by other countries include:

- Sesame Seeds or Sesame Seed-Based Products (e.g., sesame seed oil) (Canada)
- Mustard (Canada)

- Lupines (Canada)

It is the view of Upper Iowa Beef that some consumers may be sensitive to allergens, which could pose serious health risks. Therefore, we will take every precaution to control our products to ensure that there are no allergens present or introduced into the process, and to minimize the potential for cross-contamination of the most prevalent allergens.

Respectfully,
